Take me home, I never meant to betray I left my home for you, but you should have seen Yes, I moved myself into the limestone But a good lover was a fine friend I believe every lie that you ever told me Tell me, boy, what has your heart been replaced with? You lost the status quo with every tear I cry Was it a Jew to ever deserve to die? Take me home, I never meant to betray I left my home for you, but you should have seen Yes, I moved myself into the limestone But a good lover was a fine friend I wasted all my love on the enemy How did you do it? How did you blind me? I swear this heart can't be freed of the knots I tried to escape you, but I'm still alone Take me home, I never meant to betray I left my home for you, but you should have seen Yes, I moved myself into the limestone But a good lover was a fine friend At the end of the day, I know I'll believe And see who you really are when you damage me Yes, I moved myself into the limestone But a good lover was a fine friend Take me home, I never meant to betray I left my home for you, but you should have seen Yes, I moved myself into the limestone But a good lover was a fine friend At the end of the day, I know I'll believe And see who you really are when you damage me Yes, I moved myself into the limestone But a good lover was a fine friend
